Dept. of Justice;

As a computer technology person in an independent school, I cannot accept the wisdom of allowing Microsoft to provide free software as compensation for their antitrust transgressions. This would simply allow Microsoft to invade an area they do not currently dominate. Once started down the Microsoft road, schools will not be able to change course, it would simply be more and more Microsoft products. Assess a financial penalty, then if you wish to help schools, give them money, not Microsoft products.
